M 5794 (T II D 126 I): Mir. Man. ii 295-96. The fragment is evidently from one of Mani's own writings. A similar passage from his Šābuhragān is cited by al-Bīrūnī (The Chronology of Ancient Nations, ed. E. Sachau, 207), and another such passage occurs in the Coptic Kephalaia Ch. I. These show that among the prophets whom Mani recognized as his forerunners were the Buddha, Zoroaster, and Jesus.

1 dēn īg man wizīd: lit. "the religion which by me was chosen". abārīgān dēn ī pēšēnagān: "the other religions of the ancients". Note the plural adjective abārīgān qualifying a singular noun.

2 dēn ī pēšēn, andom dāš...: "the older religion, as long as (andom dā) there were holy leaders in it (-š andar)...". andom dā is treated as a compound conjunction, and dā therefore takes the suffixed pronoun (properly attached to the first word in a sentence or clause).

The apodosis is missing after būd hēnd. Evidently words must be supplied meaning something like "remained in order".

ēg-išān dēn wihurid: “then their religion became confused”. -šān depends on dēn.
 When a pronoun or other word is attached to a word ending in a consonant, a short linking vowel develops, either i or u, which is nearly always written.

sust būd hēnd: “they (i.e. the followers of the religion) became slack...”.

3 awēšān gyānān pēšēnagān...: lit.. “those former souls, by-whom (ig) in their own religion good action was not completed, come to my religion, and it verily is to-them (-šān) the gate of salvation”. uzēnišn lit. “going out” means in this context escape from the cycle of rebirths. The reading `wš`n (rather than `yš`n) is Dr. Sundermann’s.

M 49 II: Mir. Man. ii 307-8. The fragment contains an autobiographical passage from one of Mani's writings, see H. H. Schaeder, Iranica (Abhandlungen d. Gesellschaft d. Wissenschaften zu Göttingen), 3 Folge, Nr. 10, Berlin 1934), 23. Mani tells of his "Twin" (in MP. Narjamīg lit. "Male Twin"), the spirit which brought him enlightenment. According to the Coptic Kephalaia 15. 22-4, Mani claimed to have learnt all things through the Twin, and to have become with him "one body and one spirit". For the most recent investigation of the concept see A. Henrichs and L. Koenen, ZPE V, 1970, 161-89, who also (ibid., 106-14) discuss the biographical and autobiographical material about Mani, on which see further by the same authors, ZPE VIII, 1971, 247-50.

1 u-m nūn-iz xwad abāg rawēd: "and now-too he himself (i.e. the Twin) goes with me (-m abāg)". In the next sentence -m is the direct object of dārēd.

u-š pad zōr: "and through his strength".

mardōhmān xrad ... hammōzēm: "I teach wisom to men".

2 ud man ēn xīr ī yazdān...: the main verb of this sentence, for which man was probably the agent, is lost. Lit. "and by-me this thing of the gods, and the wisdom and knowledge for the gathering of souls, which-by-me (i-m) was received from that Narjamīg, was taught(?)...]".

3 *yazdān pand grift hēm: "I was seized by the counsel of the gods", i.e. divinely inspired. The reading y'n is Dr. Sundermann's.
